It seems like hundreds of skin care products are available these days and more are being added all the time. But how many of them include high-performance ingredients with effective results? Which ones are really necessary to maintain great-looking skin with a minimum amount of effort? What combinations should be used, how and when? And why can't we make good decisions as effective as professionals?

The first step to finding the right products is deciding what type of skin type you have. Most products target several individual skin types: oily skin, dry skin, sensitive skin, acne-prone skin, and combination skin, but it is truly much more than just skin type. It is your total skin condition as well. Let's give an example. Say you have dry skin, but you also suffer from hyperpigmentation (brown spots), loss of elasticity (firmness), skin tone (color including brightness), and wrinkles. It is so much easier for a professional to provide your skin analysis with recommendations for combinations, instead of treating one problem at a time. It is also the professional's experience to recommend high-performance ingredients for effective results. A professional knows the proper usage and when to change the recommendations based on both aging and seasonal symptoms. Let's face the facts. So much money is wasted on trying to choose skin products instead of using the knowledge of a professional to get the results you've been wishing for. We're here to help. Call now to schedule a skin examination to determine which products are best for you!

Eliminating bothersome wrinkles and repairing sun-damaged skin just got easier. It helps to reduce wrinkles, treat scars and improve overall skin texture, pigmentation and redness, with virtually no downtime. Good Vibrations

Lifting the skin without surgery has never been possible. Until now. ThermoCool Non-Surgical Facelift has arrived. This is a rather remarkable breakthrough, using radio frequency (RF) technology. This RF technology causes a contraction of the skin and a release of growth factors below the skin, without damaging the surface. The patient experiences only warm, mild vibrations. Astonishingly, after three months, it produces an effect similar to a mini facelift or browlift, depending upon what area(s) were treated. It can be used to lift the skin for those not quite ready for surgery, or for those wanting to enhance and refresh an existing facelift. Dr. Stevens was the first plastic surgeon in Southern California to treat patients, only after being treated himself. Finally an affordable lift without surgery and anesthesia, and absolutely no downtime. Whatever your age, male or female, look fresh-faced and beautiful! It can't get much easier.
